WISE seeks a self-motivated, highly energetic and organized Sexual Violence Prevention Program Coordinator to implement a sexual violence prevention program in collaboration with Washington Technology Magnet School and Transforming Generations. Washington Tech is a 6-12th grade public school in St. Paul and Transforming Generations is a Hmong domestic and sexual violence victim service provider. This project is funded by the US Department of Justice – Office of Violence Against Women for three years. The project will implement the Green Dot model of active bystander intervention for prevention of interpersonal violence, and will work with school resource officers, counselors, coaches, social workers, teachers and administrative staff to develop trauma-informed protocols and policies for addressing dating violence, sexual assault, stalking, cyberstalking and sex trafficking. This position will work closely with the Executive Director of WISE who will be assisting with policy and protocol development and community engagement. A Coordinated Community Response Team provides direction and oversight to this project, with members from all agency project partners. The project has completed a Community Strengths & Needs Assessment and will be developing an implementation plan over the remainder of the summer in consultation with the Assessment Consultant.
